Art Unit: 3729

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 9-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Maenishi et al (Pat. No. 6,842,974 B1); hereinafter Maenishi et al.

Maenishi et al teach a method for mounting electronic components on a board with at least two component holding devices (Cf. Abstract as well as Figs. 2 and 3). Figure 1 depicts at least two component feeding devices. The component placement devices (38a-38d) picks up components supplied by the component feeding device and are configured to move independently relative to the frame (28) on which they depend. Maenishi et al also teach that the pick and place units move relative to the frame or transfer head (28). It would have been obvious, if indeed Maenishi et al do not expressly teach, to provide that the pick and place units simultaneously pick up components. As applied to claims 11 and 16 it would have been obvious for a design engineer without undue skill to provide that a second pick and place unit move transverse to a first pick and place unit. This limitation is held to be within the ordinary skill of a PHOSITA given the teaching in Maenishi et al. As applied to claim 14 the use of a camera to detect the positions of the components is held to have been old and hence obvious. Therefore using a camera to detect positions of the components is also held to have been within the ordinary skill of a PHOSITA.
